The tract will require little or no grading, there being without any change of grade. It commands a Beautiful View of the Bay,

And its opposite shore, and has a soil of extreme richness So great are the natural attractions of the spot
that very many of the wealthy citizens of San Francisco

FROM MONTANA

We clip the following items from the Herald of the 4th inst :

NEW GOLD DISCOVERIES

Gold placers have been discovered on Vermillion creek, a tributary of the Flathead river about half way between lakes Flathead and Pend d Oreille, well up to the north which are attracting a little attention in Helgate and Bitter Root valleys—indeed the interest felt in those in the south seems to be a regular gold excitement," and it is in Spain, in intensity They are in the extreme northwest corner of Montana Full details we were not in the right but many with positiveness that gold had been discovered in that section in paying quantities by Pioneers, who live or fifteen in number came to Deer Lodge valley for supplies and returned with many friends Their report is most satisfactory and is fully credited They said that as they had not a sufficiency of provisions to thoroughly prospect the country that they were not prepared to express an opinion to any extent but firmly believed the find to be large. The prospects they obtained were not extraordinarily rich but in lieu of what would be called in mining phraseology a regular thing from fifteen to twenty dollars a day to the hand with sluice The gold resembles that of Carpenter's Bar in Blackfoot district, in bread and butter but it is to procure The diggings as shallow as dirt beginning a few inches below the grass roots Wood and water are abundant

RIVER FREIGHT

Private advices from St Louis state that the steamboat men and insurance companies of that metropolis are bent on driving the trade and travel from that city and from the river, by the extortionate charges exacted viz freight 12c insurance 6½ on side wheel and 8 cents on stern wheel boats; $300 for cabin passage to Benton

ANOTHER SILVER BUTTON

weighing 320 pounds, and valued at $1 950 in bulk, arrived here yesterday from the Argenta (A M Easter Company) mines and is now on exhibition at Messrs. Silas & Weary's bank This "button," which is circular in form, about 30 inches in diameter and 12 inches thick, was the product of 7½ tons of ore cupelled in twenty eight hours

GRAIN IN BITTER ROOT AND HELL GATE.

There were 45,000 bushels of wheat raised in these valleys last year, and half that amount of oats and barley

The following additional items we clip from the Democrat of the 6th

THE OLD CACHE

This famous lot is now under way Mr Christmas, the Superintendent informs us that the ore they are now crushing yields on the average $160 to the ton, and the capacity of the mill has never been fully tested as all the machinery belonging thereto is not yet in place, thus owing to the cold weather there has not at any time been sufficient water to work to advantage, but the present flow will in the bills of rock. We have four bars, weighing 60 oz of as pure gold as any retort we have seen, at the bank of Messrs Newland & Weary, on Saturday last—so we go We expect to hear of eight or ten thousand dollars a week from this on, as the yield of the mill, for we are assured that the strength and richness of the vein are each increasing as the work progresses

BROWN'S DISTRICT.

Since our last we have learnt from Messrs Stanton and Yeaton that on the block lode two shafts have been sunk to the depth of 50 to 75 feet respectively showing a true vein of 7 feet in width of pure quartz, yielding $360 per ton, in gold; also that sufficient work has been done on the Wayne lode and Umatilla ledge to demonstrate their permanence and richness in silver ore The gentlemen say they will give to any one or any company a chance for an interest in the above leads at fair rates

SILVER

Weekly, large cakes of pure silver are transmitted to the banking house of Newland & Weary from the Easter silver mines The last button weighed 180 pounds Argenta will be the leading city in Montana before the close of the year, as the whole surrounding country abounds with silver

WHAT THE COUNTRY MOST NEEDS —The domain of modern civilization is called Christendom To tell wherein our estate differs from that of the opulent might fill a volume Our age believes in human brotherhood and Christian charities. Our laws presuppose equal rights, and personal responsibility. Our civilization enthrones the idea of conscience, duty, humanity Legal order on such principles alone makes material progress possible, protects and fosters labor and invites universal improvement. The movement for liberty and the establishment and the maintenance of free government are due to men and to classes of men of strong moral convictions, not to say religious inspirations. Such men have wrestled with tyrannies of all kinds, and toiled to learn and diffuse truth as well as to be themselves mentally and morally free To them we owe almost everything we boast of. Doubtless what the country now most needs is an increase of the number and the power of such men. The vitality of virtue has its roots deeper than conventional morality, and from these deeper roots flows the life sap of our civilization. The prevalence of extravagance, official corruption, crime and vice, is the familiar complaint on all hands Perfidy plunged us in war, and perfidy now prolongs the course of treason Legal remedies are difficult or uncertain for much of the mass of ill, and for the rest of it to gain that they are often abandoned in despair Healing for the too prevalent moral deterioration is plainly what is most of all needed It is needed not less for our national security It can only come from the source of whatever is best in the civilization of Christendom In a word, it is not alone to legislators and the schools of learning, nor to the inspirations of art that the people must look for elevation and prosperity The sincere teachers and friends of religion must come to the rescue Their efforts, and the deepening and spread of their best convictions are what, above all things else, our country now chiefly requires —St Louis Democrat

JOHN H. SURRATT —Surratt's appearance is in his favor Looking at him casually you see a tall, slim, pale faced young fellow, who has the inoffensive air of a fourth rate law student Except for a total lack of spirituality in his face, he might almost fill the average Irish idea of a young priest He never could have been one of the "bloods" of Maryland unless fired up with whiskey—it is almost impossible to conceive that he would ever swagger about under a broad brimmed hat, with pistols in his belt and dowdity in his eyes, as is the Southern fashion Yet he is Southern even to the passion of his lips and the scorn of his nostril He is commonplace to the last degree You find it utterly impossible to make a hero of him He was a good boy while in college—the faculty wept when he left. Before the war he was a nobody. I fancy that during his boyhood he was not widely unlike the boy conspirator, Harrold—he had lots of levity, probably, but no greater concern in the practical issues of life Down in Maryland he hunted and fished and idled—he hadn't the quality of spirit that leads to society and oysterings He is selfish and cold blooded He seems of wiry and nervous build, but I think he always knew what he was about There is passion in his face, but not fire His hair is dry, long, dark and straight, but there is nothing of the typical fire eater in his appearance, least of all in his manner. I found plenty of such fellows in Virginia and North Carolina—never one north of the Maryland line His profile is irregular—the end of his chin rises as if to abut closer the vein, but reserved lips, his brows project and overhang eyes that are not accustomed to tell tales his nose is a contradiction, set between eyes and lips, and is the only feature pugnatory of Judge Holt's opinion that he is a coward —Rush City Illustrated Gazette

WOMANHOOD SUFFRAGE —John Stuart Mill has written another letter in favor of giving the suffrage to women It was addressed to a Reform meeting held in York, England, and contained the following passage

I hope you will permit me to observe that the principle that it is unjust that the great bulk of the nation should be held amenable to laws in the making of which they had no voice cannot stop at residential manhood suffrage, but requires that the suffrage be extended to women also I earnestly hope that the working men of England will show the sincerity of their principles by being willing to carry them out when urged in favor of others besides themselves

THE POPULATION OF EUROPEAN CITIES —In 1866 censuses were taken in Great Britain and France and the reports show the following population of the principal cities London, 3 037,991 Paris 1,825,274 Liverpool 484 337 Glasgow, 442,260, Manchester 458 856, Birmingham 375,+ 708 Lyons, 123,954, Dublin 418,187, Marseilles, 300 131 Leeds, 228,187, Sheffield, 218,258 Bordeaux 194,241, Edinburg, 157,128; Bristol, 163, 080 Lille, 165 770 Toulouse, 126 963 Newcastle on Tyne 112,277, Salford, 112 901, Nantes, 111 936; Hull, 105 233, and Rouen, 100 671; New York and Philadelphia have each a much greater population than any of those cities after London and Paris.

SARCASTIC —A Richmond paper says of Henry J Raymond that "no representative ought to be so popular. Every Conservative constituent of his was charmed with his speeches, and every Radical with his votes"

TUESDAY MORNING APRIL 30 1867

Oregon and the East

Crop statistics for the State of Ohio show that the average yield of wheat per acre in that State is only 9 bushels The average yield in the State of Iowa is the same Better cultivation makes the naturally poorer soil of Massachusetts yield 15 bushels per acre The Ohio farmer gets 25 bushels of oats per acre the Iowa farmer 27, and the Massachusetts farmer The crop of potatoes in Massachusetts is 90 bushels per acre, in Ohio 68 bushels, and in Iowa 67 bushels The Eastern fa[illegible] those of the Mississippi valley, the inferiority of New England soil being counterbalanced by more careful and skillful cultivation The yield in the States above named is probably very near an average of that in the Eastern, Middle and Mississippi valley States In the Pacific States the yield per acre of the principal farm products will average and perhaps exceed double the above figures. The most careless methods of farming will give 20 bushels of wheat per acre in Oregon, and with the care here that is exercised in Massachusetts, our farmers would invariably get 40 bushels per acre A greater yield even than this has often been had here from common lands with one more than ordinary care Comparisons like the above show the vast superiority of Oregon as an agricultural State, and should cause every farmer in Oregon to be contented with his situation and opportunities Markets here are better than in the great States of the Mississippi valley, and there is nothing which any other part of the country can offer that should render our agricultural population dissatisfied with their present situation, or cause a single one of our farmers to turn away from this State in the hope of finding better things elsewhere

Heard from at Last.

We are reminded that Jo Lane still lives Both he and his son, "Col" John. This is indeed news We did not know but "my dead body" was lying around somewhere ready for some one to "walk over" it. Nor had we heard of the "Colonel" since his return from his last bootless expedition to the South in search of his "rights." But we have heard of these two sterling Democrats at last. A citizen of Long Tom has seen them, and hastens to absurp the world, through the "oregon" of the fact. This inhabitant of the Long Tom settlements writes that he has been to the General's house. That his delighted eyes have actually been blessed with a sight of the "honored General" and the "distinguished, heroic Colonel" A great number of incidents relating to the "noble veterans, sire and son," are given in this letter. The story is told with delightfulfulness of detail "The General," we are are assured, 'has not been dry a single day s noe last fall" The probable explanation is that he had in a couple of barrels of "old rye" be[illegible] commenced Also, we are solemnly [illegible] that he is "ripening for the world to [illegible]" This, probably, is an allusion to a new [illegible] he has taken on the "deaf body" question We are sorry that the "heroic General" will persist in the bloody purpose he announced in [illegible] senate in 1861. It certainly bodes no good to [illegible] "The Colonel," so this annalist of [illegible] tells us "was sloshing around muddy [illegible]" but with provoking reticence the [illegible] to tell us whether "the Colonel" has [illegible] during the past winter, Next, [illegible] is made that the "battle-scarred [illegible] is determined to clear out the [illegible] and his home as he was to drive the [illegible] from Richmond a few years ago." We refrain from any expression of curiosity as to how [illegible] got there, but simply remark [illegible] pretty safe if the "Colonel" has no [illegible] them out than he had to [illegible] the back door exit of Richmond." But [illegible] success in every undertaking he may [illegible] Oregon has suffered more [illegible] than he Again we repeat that [illegible] news to hear of the "heroic General and the distinguished Colonel" [illegible] show what Democrats ought to [illegible] of them fought in the rebel army and he other approved of his actions, what better title to honor at the hands of their party ought Democrats require?

"Radicalism" of Army Officers.

Some days ago we [illegible] from a late speech delivered in the Senate by Wilson of Massachusetts a report of the murders and outrages known to have been committed upon Union men, white and black, by the rebels of the South during the last year. An Oregon Copperhead paper made this statement the occasion of some vituperative remarks about the "Radicals," charging them with inventing those stories "to perpetuate sectional hatred" and to keep up their party through sectional prejudices and animosities In order to show whether the statements in regard to outrages of this sort were well founded, we shall make some extracts from the recent reports of army officers who are on duty in the South. General Schofield, commanding the Department of Virginia, has been regarded as a "Conservative," and for this very reason was sent there by the President to supersede Gen. Terry. Here is what he says

The cases of hostility and outrage of one kind or another by white men upon freedmen are common, and, as the reports show in all such cases, the State courts fail to do justice that is, fail to punish white men for white outrages committed upon freedmen.

Gen Baird, lately commanding in Louisiana, says

In some instances I think the civil courts would do [illegible] cases where no feeling was aroused [illegible] and to the rebellion, and as be[illegible] a black man or Union man and rebel [illegible] question was raised, as a general thing [illegible] to get justice done The courts [illegible] subject to intimidation by their own prejudices, the judges, who are men of education, [illegible] would be more frequently disposed to do justice, but I am quite satisfied that they would be unable to procure justice in a suit between a white man and a black man or a Union man and a rebel.

Gen Wood, who commanded in Mississippi until the middle of January last, says

During the time I was in command in Mississippi the commission of crime generally has been frequent, but more particularly against persons of Union proclivities, and of northern men who have emigrated to Mississippi since the termination of the troubles and against freedmen. Murder was quite a frequent affair against freedmen everywhere in that community, and the combination of crimes of a lesser grade was still more frequent than the commission of murder, such as beating and assaults My observation during the time I have held command in Mississippi has been that they cannot be administered with the public sentiment of the people of the State such as it remains, against the black people, and against Union men

To the same purpose is the testimony of Gen. George H Thomas

I do not know of a single instance where the courts have punished a person for offence against a freedman They have been punished sometimes for slight offences, where the punishment was merely a fine, or something slight in its nature But in case where the penalty extends to imprisonment or summary punishment, I do not know of a single instance. I do not believe there is much chance of convicting a resident or citizen of Georgia for murder if the victim was a Union man or colored man If the murderer was a Union man or negro they would convict him very speedily, or if the man had moved into Georgia since the war and was known as a northern man or a Union man

And Gen Sickles, commanding in South Carolina, says

In my judgment, the bias of the people is so strong against the presence of the garrisons in the State and against United States soldiers that you could not find a jury in South Carolina that would convict a man for killing a Union soldier. They do not arrest anybody, nor prosecute anybody, nor in fact anybody for such offences Yet soldiers and officers have been in some instances wounded and in other instances killed They have been fired upon in repeated instances within the last year and a half, and no one has been prosecuted or punished for it by the civil authorities. Public teams and wagons have been seized on the highways within five miles of Columbia, the capital of the State. The teamsters have been tied to trees and robbed, the horses and harness taken off and wagons burned Yet no notice has been taken of such occurrences It has not been possible for us, with all the industry and energy at our command to arrest the perpetrators

The above are a few extracts from testimony recently given by several of our most distinguished army officers in regard to matters that came under their immediate personal observation These officers concurred unanimously in the opinion that the only way by which Union men could obtain justice was through military courts With this testimony before the country, does it lie in the mouth of any Northern friend of these rebels to declare the reports of outrages on Southern Union men to be groundless —to be merely false stories fabricated for the purpose of "keeping alive sectional hatred? It is the boast of some that all our distinguished army officers are "Democrats,' if this be so let them not call in question the veracity and honor of these men, pronouncing such testimony as the above the emanation of a desire to prevent the restoration of the Union by pandering to sectional prejudices

What a shame that these Generals should 'resort,' (we are quoting the language of the Herald,) "to every expedient to which they can do wise to perpetuate the sectional hatred between the North and South!" And all for a partisan purpose, too We actually fear that after all they are not "Democrats"

It is gratifying to observe that the military bill has produced some amendment in these matters, particularly in the conduct of the whites toward the blacks The former class seem to be now dealing with the latter more justly than before This change is a complete justification of the military bill

STATE ITEMS

A nugget of gold was taken out in the John Day mines a short time ago weighing $105

J. C. Day has ceased to be editor of the Columbia Press. He says that "the local matters his connection has not met with the approval of the citizens of Umatilla," which seems to be the reason for his retirement.

The Corvallis Gazette says that a vein of coal three feet thick has been discovered near Premier Mills, Yaquina Bay This lode was discovered by the slide from the mountain Experienced coal miners are now employed in opening the new mines The indications for extensive and valuable mines are good Nothing especially new from the gold mines on the beach It is the opinion of Mr Abbey that these mines would pay very well, provided the miners could save all the gold It is very fine, and consequently difficult to save The color can be found almost anywhere along the bluff.

FROM WALLA WALLA

From the Statesman of the 6th we have the following:

FATAL ACCIDENT.

On Tuesday last, a son of Judge Mitchell living at Spring Ranch, on the Linkton road about fifteen miles from town, was thrown from his horse, and almost instantly killed It appears that the boy had been sent out to drive up stock, and was mounted on a pony he had been accustomed to ride In crossing a field, the horse stumbled and threw his rider; the animal then started to run and the boy's foot having caught in a stirrup, dragged him a considerable distance, causing injuries from which the boy died before those who witnessed the accident could come to his assistance The deceased was aged fourteen years, and was regarded as a promising boy

FORMATION OF A FIRE COMPANY

A large and enthusiastic meeting of our citizens and property holders was held at the engine house, on Monday evening last, for the purpose of organizing an engine Company Mr Cook was called to the chair and F. B Johnson appointed Secretary. A temporary organization of the Company was formed by electing F. P Allen, Foreman, J Hellmuth, 1st Assistant Foreman, J D Cook, 2d Assistant Foreman; F B Johnson, Secretary, and A Kyger Treasurer A committee consisting of J. D Cook, F P Allen and Wm Reinhardt were appointed to draft a constitution and by laws and to recommend a name for the Company The committee was instructed to report next Monday evening The officers of the company were instructed to wait upon the City Council, in form them of the formation of the company and request them to turn over the engine and property to the company The name of "Washington Engine Company No 1," was adopted as the temporary name of the company. At present, there are forty-two names upon the company roll.

"SHOT ON THE DEAD LINE"—Thomas H Dorian, of the Post Office Department, says the Washington Chronicle, has executed in plaster a work of art which vividly calls to mind some of the atrocities of the rebellion, and which he calls "Shot on the Dead Line" The figure is about twelve inches high, and represents one of our emaciated soldiers at Andersonville, pierced by a bullet for crossing the dead line while reading a letter from his wife. The figure represents the soldier at the moment of receiving his death wound, and as falling, having dropped the coveted letter from his left hand, while with the right he tries unsuccessfully, by reason of weakness, to reach the wound in his breast.

The design was suggested by the following facts A soldier who had been in the Andersonville prison pen until reason had almost left its throne, and was constantly talking to himself of Mary (his wife) and children, hearing one day that a mail from the North had arrived, eagerly asked if there was a letter from "Mary." The guard said there was a letter for him, but he could not have it without first paying the postage. Having no money, he turned away in despair, but remembering that they had taken all his money when brought to the pen, he told them to take the whole and give him the letter, which was done. Tearing it open he commenced reading while walking along, and accidentally got his head over the "dead line," when a sentinel shot him dead.

CAPITAL STOCK, $1,000,000!

Directors

JOHN PARROTT, CHAS B McLANE,
WM C. RALSTON, A HATWARD,
LOUIS A. CARNETT.

LOUIS A CARNETT President and Manager
JOHN HEWSTON Jr Chemist and Superintendent

THIS COMPANY HAVING GREATLY enlarged their Refining Works, and introduced many other important improvements, are pleased to announce that they feel warranted in again reducing materially their terms of doing business.

THE TARIFF OF CHARGES

Which they now submit to the public considered with reference to the cost of material and labor—is lower than in any other part of the world, and secures to the mining interest of this coast an important increase in both the refuting and commercial value of bullion

Their charges hereafter will be as follows:

FOR ASSAYING DEPOSITS FOR UNPARTED GOLD BARS

One eighth of one per cent (heretofore a quarter) for all amounts over $1,000, and two dollars for any smaller sum. Returns made in twenty-four hours

FOR ASSAYING DEPOSITS FOR UNPARTED SILVER BARS

Two dollars for the gold contained, up to $1,000, and one-eighth of one per cent, for all amounts over that sum, and one per cent on the silver contained Returns made in twenty-four hours

FOR REFINING DEPOSITS MADE FOR COIN OR FINE BARS.

On bullion under 300 parts gold, 2 cents per ounce.
On bullion from 300@600 parts gold, 4 cents per ounce
On bullion from 600@750 parts gold, 6 cents per ounce
On bullion from 750@940½ parts gold, 8 cents per ounce

Above 950 the only charge will be for coinage But there will be no charge for refining less than two dollars

FOR COINING GOLD

This charge will be the same as at the Mint—a half of one per cent—and which is paid by us to that institution But there will be no charge in future for making fine gold or silver bars from bullion refined by us

RETURNS IN COIN IN FORTY EIGHT HOURS

Silver contained in deposits for coin will be accounted for at the same rate customary at the Mint

Gold bars of other Assayers, in good standing, will be cashed by us at the highest market rates

Gold and bullion can be forwarded to us from any part of the country, and returns made through Wells, Fargo & Co's Express

CHARGES AT U S BRANCH MINT

For the convenience of those not familiar with the terms of the Mint, we subjoin the tariff of charges now in force at that institution

For refining bullion under 300 parts gold, 3 cents per ounce

For refining bullion from 300@600 parts gold, 5 cents per ounce

For refining bullion from 600@750 parts gold, 7 cents per ounce.

For refining bullion from 750@830 parts gold, 11 cents per ounce.

For refining bullion from 830@940½ parts gold, 14 cents per ounce

The charge for coinage is half of one per cent, and the charge for making fine silver is 3rd, the same

Comparing the net value of deposits for coinage with the proceeds of imparted gold bars sold in the market—assuming that the bars have cost ½ of one per cent—they must be sold at the following par rates to equal the return which would have been made had they been deposited for coinage

$50 per to equal Mint return, at refining charge of 14 cents
$45 per to equal Mint return at refining charge of 14 cents
$35 per to equal San Francisco A & R Works return at refining charge of 8 cents mh14d2p3m

AN ANTIDOTE FOR POISON.

THE PAIN KILLER.—Rev T Allen, writing from Tavoy, Burmah, says: "Within the past four years I have used and disposed of about five hundred bottles, but am now out. Please send me a fresh supply as soon as you can—say two hundred bottles. I dare not be without it myself and there are endless calls for it, both by Burmans and Karens I always take it with me into the jungles, and have frequent occasion to use it, both on myself and others. One night, while sleeping in an open Zayatz, I was awoke by a most excruciating pain in my foot On examination, I found I had been bitten by a centipede. I immediately applied the Pain Killer, and found instant relief In less than an hour I was again asleep."

Rev Mr Hibbard, writing from Burmah to his father, says I have used Davis' Pain Killer for coughs, colds, summer complaints, burns and for the sting of scorpions, with uniform success. We always keep it where we can lay our hands on it in the dark, if need be ap24dtw

Spring is Coming!

I know it by the hyacinths
Which now begin to blow,
And flitting voices strangely sweet
And tremulously low;
By something purer in the sun
And softer in the air
And holier in the twilight stars
That Spring will soon be here.

The almanacs are well enough
For gardeners and for cooks—
I seek the seasons in the sky
And find them by the brooks.
I hear them on the breezy hills,
And in the hollows see
The token flowers and signs that speak
Their messages to me.

And thus I guess from evening lilies
Of sunset in the west
From waving of unfolding wings
That will not go to rest
From spells of fragrance spiced afar
And peeping spears of green,
And silver bugles in the wind—
The advent of a queen!

I know it by the hyacinths
Which now begin to blow;
That Winter, on his icy bed,
Is dead or nearly so
And soon will come, with flaxen curls
Led by the laughing hours,
The blue-eyed daughter of the Sun,
In glorifying showers.—A. J. Requier

The Minister's Guests

Elinor Blake was deeply in love with the Rev Alliston Grengor, and her affection was reciprocated So they were married.

Mr. Granger lived in the country, and if you want to know what kind of life his was, just you go and settle somewhere just out of a city with all of the inhabitants of which you are more or less acquainted—each and every one of whom will consider it an especial duty to come out and take dinner or tea with you a half dozen times a year, and all of whom will consider it an insult if your wife don't have three kinds of cake—and fresh milk, eggs and honey on the table Of course people who live in the country are expected to have all these in great abundance

Mrs Granger was a very pleasant, agreeable woman, and tried her best to have everything smooth, and she was overrun with company

A minister, among other things is expected to keep a hotel, and to keep it in a way our modern landlords don't very well understand, without money and without price.

It must be open night and day, and hot meals served at all hours. Nobody must be refused admittance. People who are too low to stay at the tavern, are sent to the minister's Treat peddlers, book peddlers, agents, woman's rights lecturers—everybody, in fact, must go to the minister's.

And then if the poor clergyman, thinking of his overworked wife, and the consumptive state of his larder, ventures to hint that his salary is a small one, he is piously reminded that St. Paul and St Peter, and those other fine fellows of that epoch, did not dream of receiving any salary at all.

But whether they kept tavern and entertained all creation upon free cost does not appear

Mrs. Granger was not a strong woman, and having been brought up delicately, her burden fell heavily. They were too poor to employ help, and she did all the work except washing

The people who came visiting her never offered their assistance about anything Of course not It would have been too vulgar; And most of the ladies were invalids—(did you ever notice that those people who go visiting most are usually out of health?)

But we on the present occasion, have only to do with the Rev Asa Downe and wife, and their three or four children, Abel, Priscilla, Rachel Ann and Abasuerus Nicodemus. Our story is about them, and the host of other people who visited Mr. and Mrs Granger shall rest in obscurity.

The Drownes arrived late one Saturday evening, when Mrs Granger was almost dead with the headache, having just got rid of three ministers and a colporteur, Mr. Granger had just finished his sermon for the morrow—the doors were locked, and the family were about retiring for the night.

A ring at the front door. Mrs. Granger's heart sank—Mr. Granger drew a sigh and went to the door.

On the steps were two trunks, as many bandboxes, several bundles—a poodle dog, a fat, red-faced man—a woman of about the same style, and four children

"My dear Brother Granger I" cried the man, meeting Mr Granger's hand, and giving it a heart-rending wring, "I am the Rev Asa Drowne—a wandering itinerant—until this is my wife and these are my children. We came at once to your house because we knew you would be mortally offended if we did not. My wife is a great invalid! A dreadful sufferer! Been sick for seven years! And I am afraid as of it now in the beginning, we must sleep one where in a fire I I couldn't have Elinor Jane away from the fire for a thousand dollars I want your wife to see that the sheets are aired before an open fire, and let them be Mary wife is nervous—exceedingly nervous—and will not sleep a wink in coarse sheets unless they have been well aired! Mind that! I tell you have them."

"I will be up in the morning Mr I had to sleep in the sheets when Mrs Drowne a sheet, fat old woman of forty five or fifty—"I came very near getting to my new home about a week ago sleeping on an unbleached pillow case by mistake, that I was dead for over two days."

Mr Granger wanted on them into the sitting room and presented them to his wife.

Elinor in a stuffed rocking-chair" exclaimed Mrs Drowne, who, "I cannot sit a moment in an uncushioned chair! And I will take a little tea and a bowl of oysters, or a piece of cold mince pie, I feel so faint!"

"And I will trouble you for a cup of coffee," said Mr. Drowne—"it will be a sort of stay for my stomach until supper is ready. What time will you have supper?"

Mrs. Granger retired to the back of her stove—her temples throbbing to bursting—and her heart the least bit rebelling at the influx of these exacting visitors.

"I want some gingerbread and some milk," yelled Abel, the eldest boy. "I'm half starved! Where's the cupboard? I'll help myself."

"I want a doughnut," yelled Priscilla, "and if I can't have that rocking-chair that Mr. Granger's sitting in, I don't stay! so there!"

"What a little mean room!" said Nicodemus, "by crackee! what's that are on the table!" and he flew at a statuette of Psyche—presented to Mr Granger by a dear friend, who was then dead, and which was very highly valued by him on that account

"Hello!" cried Nicodemus, "it's slippery, hain't it?" and down went the Psyche smash on the floor—owing to the forehead, and splitting off the largest part of the nose

Mr. Granger sprang up with an exclamation of dismay.

"Oh, it's no matter!" said Mrs. Drowne, "you can mend it again with some of Spaulding's glue. I mended a mug with it the other day. I hate them things standing round on tables They look like dead flies! Mrs. Granger, seems to me you dress a little too stylish for the wife of a minister of the gospel! You've got a red ribbon on your hair I observe Now I never allow myself to wear red ribbon. I try to make myself as plain as possible."

"You needn't try very hard," said Mrs. Granger to herself.

"My wife is a model for a minister's wife," said Mr. Drowne, "would that there were more like her. Elisa Jane, my love, you ought to have a bath Mrs Granger will see to it at once"

After a while the Drownes were got off to bed. Such a supper as they had eaten pi Mrs Granger drew a long breath in thinking of it, she had never dreamed of such achievements in the eating line

The next morning everything went wrong. Mr Drowne's dyspepsia was worse—he must have fresh eggs, and soda crackers, and toast, and some cream and honey, and coffee. His appetite was dreadful poor

Mrs. Drowne was wretched. She had not slept a wink because there were hen's feathers in the bed. She was sure of it—and she never could sleep on hen's feathers! They stuffed her up so

The children amused themselves with cutting paper, and too late Mr. Granger made the discovery that his sermon, on which he had spent the previous day, had been converted into paper dolls, and horses with any number of legs from two to twenty.

"Law sake, don't take on about it," said Mrs. Drowne "The little dears didn't mean to do it, bless 'em!"

Just after dinner, Aunt Peggy Trim, Mrs Granger's aunt, arrived for a visit. Aunt Peggy was a very determined person, and she took charge of the kitchen at once, and sent Mrs Granger off to church with her husband The Drownes were not well enough to go they said

Mrs. Drowne had a story, and Mr. Drowne lay on the sofa and slept. Suddenly Mrs Drowne missed Fan, the poodle

"Good gracious!" cried she, "where is Fan?"

The children looked up from their employment of smearing the pictures in a handsome Polyglot bible with red ink—and giggled

"What have you done with Fanny?" queried the mother

"We've had a funeral," said Abel, with a grin

"A funeral!" shrieked Mrs. Drowne—"what do you mean?"

"She's in Mrs Granger's work box, all buried as nice as anybody in the garden," said Nicodemus "Abel preached the sermon, and Lilly and I followed as mourners! Abel was sexton! Cracky, wasn't that jolly?"

Mrs Drowne rushed to the garden, followed by the whole company, and sure enough in Mrs Granger's dahlia bed the dog was found buried! The dahlias were all pulled up by the roots and wilting and dying in the sun, and the dog, very much stiffed in the work box, looked sorry enough as he leaped out with a howl

The night was too much for the sensitive Mrs. Drowne She threw up her hands crying out—"Oh, gracious me! I'm dying! Farewell, Asa!" and fell back on the ground

"Oh, dear!" cried Mr Drowne, "she's had such spells for the last seven years! The doctor said she'd die sometime! Help me carry her into the house"

Aunt Peggy lent a hand, and the senseless woman was deposited on the sofa

"She's dead! Alas, she's dead!" moaned Mr Drowne "Get the camphor and some hot lemonade, and some flannels wrung out of boiling water—"

"If she's dead, I guess the sooner she's laid out the better!" said Aunt Peggy "You have got rid of an awful great burden, brother Drowne, you'd ought to thank the Lord for it! A wife that's seven years a dying must be dreadful to get along with! I should have kept a coffin in the house all the time. Hand me the shears! I'll take her hair off the first thing, you can sell that to the barber It'll make a splendid waterfall for somebody!"

The dead woman sprang to her feet and dived at Aunt Peggy

"You'll have my hair off, will you? You old Jezebel! I'll have your'n off first, see if I don't!" and with that she grabbed Aunt Peggy's false front, and posied her head quicker than a Cherokee Indian could have done it

Aunt Peggy's dander rose She seized the broom, and in less time than it takes me to write it, she had driven every Drowne about the premises out of doors And then she piled their baggage out after them There they sat on their trunks until Dea Buckley of the other church came along—when they told him their tale of wrong—and he took them home with him

The next day he was so anxious to forward them on their journey that he carried them ten miles and left them at the house of another minister

Of course the affair made a great deal of scandal in Brookville—but some people were sensible enough to commend Aunt Peggy.

But Mr Granger is still keeping a hotel, and is well patronized by the traveling public If you should happen to pass through Brookville, you will save a dollar or two by stopping all night with Mr. Granger He won't mind it—he's used to it.

Authentic "Injun History"

POCAHONTAS AND CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH.

The "Fat Contributor" of the Cincinnati Times gives the following true version of this historical incident.

The celebrated Captain John Smith, the saving of whose life by Pocahontas is a historic event of no little incident—especially to Smith at that time—was the earliest settler of Virginia (Grant being the last settler they have had in that State,) and stands at the head of the Smith family in this country. We are informed that there is a John Smith living in one of the Western States, but he could not be the same man who settled Virginia, because he would have been too young at that time (1607) to settle anything. He could not have settled for his board even. Captain Smith founded Jamestown, which was tolerably unfounded (like many of the anecdotes about him) up to that period Besides giving Jamestown a start, he started a number of Indian villages, so that they never came back again. It is said that he could start a village of that description quicker than any man living at that time. He started so many that the red men, hearing of it through the daily papers, (the Indians were well red in those days), determined to check his enterprise.

Smith speculated a good deal in corn, purchasing it in the interior and shipping it to Jamestown, which was the great grain centre at that time, Chicago not having been yet discovered In one of his trips in search of corn he trespassed upon the dominions of King Powhatan, a powerful Chief, who, from his entrenchments on the James, had long threatened Washington. Smith, being somewhat overloaded with corn, fell into an ambuscade and was captured by Powhatan's savages and taken before their Chief. After a brief hearing, in which no witnesses were examined for the defence (Smith demanded a jury trial, but was refused,) he was condemned to die He was asked if he had anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon him. He said, nothing in particular, only his death would seriously interfere with the settlement of Virginia, and might retard her readmission into the Union. This had no effect whatever, and he was marched to the place of execution. There was a boulder on which to place his head, while a savage, painted in the most hideous manner, was swinging a stuffed club and uttering diabolical cries, impatient to mash him.

John gazed upon the preparations undismayed, for he belonged to one of the first families of Virginia (the second families had not arrived from Virginia yet,) and he didn't think a scare worth a continental! Powhatan, with a generosity one would hardly look for in a savage, asked him if there was any message he would like to send to his family, and even offered to take charge of any little momentoes he desired to leave for them. He immediately bethought him of an "Accident Insurance" policy, which would expire about the same time he did, and a ticket in a Gift Enterprise (only 20,000 unsold,) both of which he declared to be sent to his betrothed. Powhatan promised to send them by the next steamer. Captain Smith then walked firmly to the block without the aid of crutches, placed his head upon it, and bade the master to begin to mash! At this moment the forest rang with a scream, and a beautiful Indian maiden darted into the midst of the throng. Raising her parasol to protect the head of Smith from the impending club, she exclaimed:

"Hold! Red man, stay thy hand? (She could not stay it herself because she didn't wear any stays) Slay him and Virginia remains a howling wilderness. (Prolonged howls from the savages) Spare him and ratify the Constitutional Amendment, and Virginia resumes her place in the Union"

Some reconstructed Secesh savages shouted "Never!" and rushed on Smith with their carving knives, but Powhatan interfered.

"Spare his life," said he, "the Great Spirit wills it. (This put Smith in great spirits at once) I commute his sentence to the obloquy of founding the first families of Virginia, Smith git up and git!"

And Smith got

He lived to found the first families of Virginia Pocahontas went across the water as Commissioner to the Paris Exhibition for years after with great success.

HOW AN EARL TRIED TO LEARN A LANGUAGE AND FAILED.—The Pall Mall Gazette has this sharp paragraph:

Earl St. Maur, who, seven years ago, took up his abode in Albania, to learn its language and regenerate its people, is now at Tangiers with the same benevolent views towards the Moors. We take this from the Court Journal, a paper which is obviously worth nothing if it does not tell us really nice and true things about Earls and their goings on. But did Earl St Maur regenerate the Albian people and learn their language? We are assured by a gentleman well versed in Turkish affairs whose position gives weight to what he says—we hope we may be allowed to borrow the predatory words with which an evening contemporary has just been promulgating so surprising a mess of news about Turkish politics as ever was honored with big print—that Albania was still in a state of reprobation, and therefore has not been regenerated. As for the language, we happen to know that his lordship broke down at the 47th letter of the Albanian alphabet, which is described by Col Leake as resembling the French u, but having a more slender sound, thrown upwards towards the nostrils His friends put it into his head that nobleman's nostrils were not made to have the vowel sounds of unregenerate hill tribes thrown upwards towards them, nor are they After that he gave it up, which, to be sure, he would have done later had he got on as far as the irregular verbs, which are very trying As for the Moors, we sincerely trust he will never come across a copy of Prof Newman's Handbook of Modern Arabic, if he values the retention of his wits—unless he treats it as a picture book, by reason of the Professor's new characters, which are inverted crescents on poles and such like The elder children of our famous aristocracy may do anyting and have done most things But they have never had this sort of work assigned to them before, nor have we heard anything like it, except an obscure rumor of another elder son, who went over to have his illog at Paris, and did it by taking an old Rabbi into keeping, in order to read the Talmud with him

ENIGMA.—It lives in Italy, though it is found nowhere on the face of the earth Though it is known to be in all cities, yet it was never in any town, village or hamlet It was always found in kitchens and ditches, though it was never in a house or trench Wherever wit and frivolities exist, there it may be found, though it is always out of humor Though it figures in ballets, yet it was never seen in a dress It is always the companion of pity and charity, yet it has nothing to do with religion It is not in existence, yet, with out it, man's spirit would be broken. It is in Switzerland and Brittany at the same time and yet it is in neither What is it! Echo answers it"
